The Problem

- “Ponzinomics”
 - Unsustainable APY’s; The collapse of token values once new investors dry up.
- Lack of transparency
 - Broken promises of DAO governance to inflated projections of ROI on protocol investments.
- “Rug pulls”
 - Developer teams pulling the liquidity out of protocols flatlining token price action.

Sad but not surprising on Celsius.

I kept frens away from all "opportunities" of this kind through the power of "explain where the yield coming from?"

The Demand

- Passive income generation;
 - Sustainable long term yields that present a viable higher yield alternative to Traditional Finance offerings.
- Safe haven;
 - Safe harbour from market volatility. Confidence in the security of assets held. Transparency on how protocols operate and sustain APY.
- Community Centric;
 - Community feedback and governance.

The screenshot shows a web interface for finding savings accounts. At the top, there's a search bar with 'Savings & MMAs' selected, a zip code of '92602' for 'Irvine, CA', and a deposit amount of '$25,000'. Below this is a table with columns for 'Bank/Institution', 'APY', 'Min. balance', and 'Est. earnings'. Three accounts are listed: Marcus by Goldman Sachs (0.50% APY, $0 min. balance, $125 earnings), American Express National Bank (0.50% APY, $1 min. balance, $125 earnings), and wealthfront (0.35% APY, $1 min. balance, $88 earnings). The APY column is highlighted with a red box.
